Seasonal Beekeeping: Getting Ready For and Then Surviving Winter

Sponsored by Betterbee

Dr. David T. Peck, PhD

Betterbee's Director of Research and Education

Even though it's in the 80's beekeepers need to be prepping for winter. Tune into our next webinar "Seasonal Beekeeping: Getting Ready For and Then Surviving Winter" on Thursday September 14th at 7 pm, presented by Dr. David Peck, Betterbee's Director of Research and Education. He will talk about late-season mite management, fall feeding, winter inspections, and emergency winter feeds that we can offer to our bees, and more.

Seasonal Management for Successful Overwintering

Sponsored by Kennebec Beekeepers Association

Jennifer Lund , Maine State Apiarist

Jen will go through all of the seasons, pointing out colony management goals for each month, with the idea that winter prep doesn't start in September/October but with the very first hive opening of the season.
